Characters with Character!

During this exciting assembly program, our actor transforms into the three characters below...right before the students' eyes! What links these characters together is common themes of commitment to literacy, independence, a love of learning, tolerance, compassion, determination and hard work.

Mark Twain begins this fast-paced program. Your students are visiting him in his home where he tells humorous stories from his childhood along with a story of his own for children. Within the humor there is a strong message of standing for ones principles, and the need to respect our differences.

Our actor quickly changes makeup and costume and resets the stage for Thomas Edison. Mr. Edison is all about industry, hard work, practicality. We are the masters of our own destiny! The message is demonstrated as he tells of his childhood and shows off some of his more amazing inventions.

Lastly, your students will visit with Abraham Lincoln. As he describes childhood and then his present life in the White House, your students see that an ordinary person can become extraordinary if they stick to their values and beliefs and work for what is right and just.

"Entertainment with a Purpose"

Hands-On History

We bring the Museum to you! Your students will travel back in time to dress-up in costumes, handle objects and play with toys from the Victorian Era. There are six stations and dozens of objects and activities. Everything is designed to be touched and used. The perfect supplement to this exciting program.
